Mayonnaise by Benjamin Moore is having a moment – does this mean magnolia neutrals are having a revival?

Designers share how to decorate with the warm and bright neutral to bring a sense of calm to any space

When it comes to creating a color scheme around the shade, Caroline Brackett of Caroline Brackett Studio of Design notes several exciting possibilities. She's found success pairing the hue with bold navy and French blues, contrasting cool statement colors with the classic creamy shade. Plus, she says there's plenty of room to add some pattern to the mix.

'It's a beautiful, warm hue that works with the background of many floral fabrics and wallpapers that we love,' she says.

Caroline suggests keeping trim on the simple side, though, saying she likes to match Mayonnaise-colored walls with the same shade for the trim. This helps to avoid a contrast that contributes to a dated look, she says.

Because it can be intimidating to choose 'the best white paint' when decorating your home, and bright yellows can be just as daunting, Caroline suggests using Mayonnaise for a 'happy, in-between choice.' She also recommends Farrow & Ball's Matchstick for a creamy, warm neutral that never dates.
