

Colored Glassware Is The Trend Your Spring Tablescape Needs

By SARAH LYON | Published on 03/21/22

We independently research, test, review, and recommend the best products—learn more about our process. If you buy something through our links, we may earn a commission.

Casa Watkins Living

Springtime means the return of outdoor entertaining, an influx of wedding celebrations, and graduation parties galore. If you're hosting this season and are looking to add some extra oomph to your tabletop, we can't be bigger fans of colored glassware. And, as it turns out, designers love it, too.

"Colored glassware conjures up happy images and is perfect for spring when people are re-emerging to outdoor life, entertaining, and eating al fresco," designer Lina Galvao says. "I love blue colored glass as a solid classic option, though I've seen tons of new intros to the market in a blushy mauve tone, which is super elegant and more subdued. Colored glassware is definitely a great way to inject personality to a tablescape or to a casual dinner on the patio, and is a great item to debut in the spring!"

DuraClear DuraClear Titan Faceted Drinking Glasses Set

View On Williams-Sonoma

Ok, so these glasses aren't actually made from glass—they're constructed out of a shatter-proof plastic. This makes them especially wonderful for outdoor activities, and you won't have to worry about little ones using them, either. The colorful set of six would also look nice and cheery displayed on open kitchen shelving or used as decor. As designer Caroline Brackett states, "Buy colored glassware and use it! It is also great to accessorize with or use for flower arrangements—doesn't have to be saved for the dining table!"